Chef Jacques Haeringer believes that "Love Begins in the Kitchen." Whether in his role as successful restaurateur, award-winning chef or in the family kitchen, Chef Jacques has inspired millions with his love of cooking.

To understand his inspiration, one needs only to meet his father, Francois, who created the original Chez Francois in the heart of Washington, DC, just a few blocks from the White House, nearly 50 years ago. Francois Haeringer was one of the pioneers who established French cuisine in a post-war America. The heritage of Jacques' Alsatian ancestors is now a strong influence in not only his recipes, but in his beliefs about nutrition. Free-range meats and poultry and organically-produced fruits and vegetables are important elements in the diet of the region. Jacques has taken these Alsatian traditions and incorporated them into his recipes, allowing you to experience the rich flavors of his native homeland while preparing more nutritious meals.

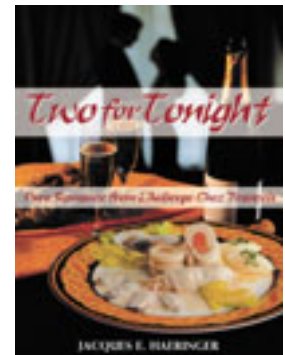

Now you can take a scenic drive down a beautiful country road among the lush green hills of Northern Virginia where you will find L'Auberge Chez Francois - a favorite of celebrities, foreign dignitaries and power brokers in Washington. The restaurant is a creative family effort with Jacques as the Chef de Cuisine and brothers Paul and Robert managing the restaurant.

Alsations believe that great food should be served in an intimate setting along with beautiful scenery. Such is the experience at L'Auberge Chez Francois. Creating a romantic atmosphere among the towering trees and rolling hills of Virginia, the backdrop makes a drink or a meal under the stars a special occasion.

Readers of Washingtonian magazine have voted L'Auberge Chez Francois as their favorite restaurant 16 years in a row. The restaurant has received numerous awards and accolades, including AAA's Four Diamond Award for their outstanding service and quality.

Chef Jacques Haeringer has developed a simple guide to planning and preparing meals at home that create a sense of celebration in his book, Two for Tonight: Pure Romance from L'Auberge Chez Francois. It shows you how to enjoy special moments with your someone by bringing them into the kitchen to put the finishing touches on your meal together. For Jacques, preparing a meal or special treat for your family or significant other shows your love for them more than any gift ever could.
